My name is Aaron Tremaine, and now I am a sales engineer at Sweetwater. The best part about having LRAP is just the options that it opens up to you. When I was at college, I was getting a music business degree. A lot of parts of the music business don't start out with a high paying job. LRAP basically made it so I didn't have to worry as much about where am I starting line's going to be, you know, what paycheck am I going to get coming in right out of the gate? You got to work up in a lot of jobs and the music business is no different. You start low, you put in your time, and then work hard and do a good job. And, and LRAP gives you freedom to, to choose the career you want to.

LRAP was a big part of me staying in college, actually. Um, a lot of times I would be thinking about switching schools or moving out or trying something else, or just quitting in general and knowing that if I did that, you know, I wouldn't get LRAP. And having LRAP was such a big part of my decision that it definitely kept me on track. I probably wouldn't have chosen the school honestly. Um, at that time, money was super tight for me. Um, I knew that I could take out the loans, but I was worried about the total cost. Having LRAP being offered to me was the reason why.
